Description:

Review "An Oriental Tom Jones." -- Newsweek

Liang Heng was born in 1954 in Changsha, a large city in Central China. His parents were intellectuals -- his father a reporter on a major provincial newspaper, his mother a ranking cadre in the local police. This is Liang Heng's own story of growing up in the turmoil of the Great Cultural Revolution. His story is unique, but at the same time it is in many ways typical of those millions of young Chinese who have been tested almost beyond endurance in recent years. In his words we hear an entire generation speaking.

"A poignant inside look at what happened to ordinary citizens when the movement that ousted Chiang Kaishek's totalitarianism turned against itself. Liang helps Americans understand the past that China's leaders must overcome to cope with the future."

-- The Chicago Sun-Times

"Three stories in one -- first, a graphic, I-was-there account of what it was like to grow up during the Cultural Revolution; second, a cliffhanger love story with a happy ending; and third, a poignant analysis of how Chinese people have tried and failed, and tried again, to break out of their past. Each of these accounts is worth reading on its own." -- The New York Review of Books

"A significant event in our understanding of China...compelling, detailed, and devastating."

-- The New Republic

From the Inside Flap An autobiography of a young Chinese man whose childhood and adolescence were spent in Mao's China during the Cultural Revolution.

Son of the Revolution, written by Liang Heng with his wife, Judith Shapiro, is a memoir of the Chinese Cultural Revolution and is both the story of Liang's own coming-of-age and a chronicle of China's political and cultural upheaval following the Communist Party's rise to power in the mid-1900s. Liang Heng is born in Changsha, a large city in central China, in 1954, five years after Chairman Mao established the Communist People's Republic of China. He has two elder sisters, Liang Fang and Liang Wei-ping, and his parents are both Communist Party hopefuls with distinguished jobs. In 1966, when Liang is twelve, the Cultural Revolution begins, and his family is once again facing upheaval. One group of citizens after another falls victim to political criticism.
