European Union law is a system of rules operating within the member states of the European Union. Since the founding of the Coal and Steel Community after World War II, the EU has developed the aim to "promote peace, its values and the well-being of its peoples". The EU has political institutions, social and economic policies, which transcend nation states for the purpose of cooperation and human development. According to its Court of Justice the EU represents "a new legal order of international law". European Union law is the system of laws operating within the member states of the European Union. The EU has political institutions and social and economic policies.

Introduction to EU Law. How does the EU pass new laws? IR477 - Law and Institutions of the European Union - Lecture 1.1. European Union Law - Lec 00 - Introduction. What is the difference between Directives, Regulations and Decisions? Transcription. Contents. 1 History. 2 Constitutional law. 2.1 Treaties. 2.2 Executive institutions. The European Union is unique among international organisations in having a complex and highly developed system of internal law which has direct effect within the legal systems of its member states. The EU is not a federal government, nor is it an intergovernmental organisation. It involves reciprocal agreement within its fields of activity, as if countries have agreed to work together to agree. There are three types of Union law: primary legislation: the treaties.
