Formatted as one of those hardcover, mini encyclopedia for kids, Why Shouldn't I Drop Litter? opens with a colour photo of autumn leaves on the ground and the reminder that this, too, is called "litter", leaf litter. The difference being that "Nature has ways of dealing with things that are no longer wanted" When we give all the money and power to fast food places we shouldn't be asking ourselves why standards are slipping everywhere we look. (Of note: interesting how people will throw money at the burger joint that happily pollutes the world for profit, but the same person resents paying a few extra bucks to keep a community well supplied with garbage cans.)
