HIV prevention is not just about following rules. It's about knowing who you are, what you believe, and when to act in order to protect yourself and others from infection. It requires an informed, holistic approach—one that enables you to do more than just roll the dice, but to understand the very dynamics of infection and ways to prevent it from happening. With a little work, you can build an effective, individualized HIV-prevention strategy.

Newer prevention tools like PreP and TasP offer greater protection against HIV, reducing not only the risk of getting the virus but passing it on. Short of abstinence, condoms are still the most reliable method of preventing pregnancy, HIV, and other sexually transmitted infections (STIs). TasP and PrEP cannot do all three of these things. Moreover, preventing STIs is important because they can often facilitate HIV infection by undermining the integrity of vaginal or anal tissues.
