The faculty of the FAU Department of Sociology are committed to sociology as a critical scholarly endeavor in the service of humanity. The faculty are diverse in their research and teaching, reflecting a discipline that contains multiple theoretical perspectives, a broad range of substantive fields, and a tradition of ongoing debate about the best way to ask and answer questions about the social world. As the American Sociological Association advises students, "The 21st century labor market is fast-changing, increasingly global, and technology-driven. The jobs that you may apply for as a graduate may not even exist yet. To navigate the 21st century means being able to keep up with the changing world." In The Color of Opportunity, Haya Stier and Marta Tienda ask: How do race and ethnicity limit opportunity in post-Civil Rights Chicago? Research Interests The Postgraduate Department of Sociology was established in 1966 under the dynamic leadership of Sr. Marie Cecile CSST who went on to become the Principal of the College. Ours was the first department to offer Sociology at the postgraduate level exclusively for women. 5 years later, the B.A. Sociology course was started in 1971. 1985 was a landmark for the department as it was raised to the status of a research centre. The Department of Sociology envisions excellence in teaching, research, service and support activities for the greater understanding and resolution of societal problems, and to Home. Welcome. The Department of Sociology at Texas A&M University offers a quality undergraduate education, recognized as one of the nation's leading programs in the field by the American Sociological Association. The department offers a broad-based curriculum with excellent opportunities for training in various areas of faculty expertise and research. In 1920, the Department of Rural Social Science was created that incorporated both sociology and agricultural economics. The Sociology and Anthropology department was created in 1969 and left the College of Agriculture to become part of the College of Liberal Arts. During this time, the Department of Rural Sociology also existed.
