Aims

- 1. To examine changing discourses about deviance, criminality, punishment, and discipline and how these have been articulated within literary and non-literary texts*
- 2. To extend students' skills in online research and interpretation by analysing, comparing, and considering the connections between a wide range of digital and* archival primary sources

3. To introduce students to digital humanities research and dissemination by the production of a public online collaborative blog, 'Criminal Lives: An Online Collaborative Research Project on Prison Voices', with student individual and co

Learning Outcomes

After completing the module the student should be able to:

- 1 Exercise significant judgement in relation to debates concerning crime and punishment, and relate these to careful analysis of a range of literary and non-literary sources.
- 2 Accept responsibility for preparing and leading a student workshop by working collaboratively to set up appropriate questions and seminar tasks and by facilitating class discussion.
- 3 Generate ideas in relation to a research project, outlining the questions, sources, and approaches which would be used to investigate a research question arising out of issues and material explored on the module.

Notes

This research-based module explores a range of writings and voices on the subject of crime and punishment in the 18th and 19th centuries. We will assess the argument that this period saw a profound transformation in the organisation of punishment and in the idea of the offender by tracing the changing experience and representation of the convicted, and the significance of their voices. We will investigate how the designation of crime and its punishment might be related to other forms of social discipline and self-regulation and explore why narratives of criminality and confinement, confession and detection have proved so compelling to readers and writers of novels, popular literature, and sensational journalism.

The module is also designed to introduce you to the tools and language of digital humanities research and dissemination. On the module you will participate in the production of an online collaborative blog. You will practice the skills of blog design, writing and tagging. Over the module you will undertake a mixture of individual and group research towards the production of public posts. You will be responsible for sharing research and proof-reading each others' work and for disseminating the project research blog 'Criminal Lives' via social media, email etc.

The occurrence of the convict cichlid represents the first record for Hidalgo. But former convict Mark Leech, editor of the national prisoners' newspaper, Converse, said there was no justification to retry him. The jury decided that the case was not strong enough to convict. Part of. A convict is "a person found guilty of a crime and sentenced by a court" or "a person serving a sentence in prison". Convicts are often also known as "prisoners" or "inmates" or by the slang term "con", while a common label for former convicts, especially those recently released from prison, is "ex-con" ("ex-convict"). Persons convicted and sentenced to non-custodial sentences tend not to be described as "convicts". Richard Egan, senior partner at criminal defence lawyers Tuckers Solicitors, who is representing convicted killer Jack Shepherd, said he has received death threats.

Convict: Law To find or prove (someone) guilty of an offense or crime, especially by the verdict of a court: The jury convicted the defendant of manslaughter. Have fun studying. Remember to take breaks.

This represents about 45 percent of all convicts landed in Australia and 15–20 percent of all those transported within the British Empire in the period 1615–1920. In the years to the ending of the Napoleonic Wars prisoners arrived in Van Diemen's Land intermittently, as during times of warfare increased military recruitment resulted in lower rates of unemployment. The reverse was true in periods of peace where demobilisation appears to have created hardship, particularly in urban areas. To be convicted is to feel the sheer loathsomeness of sin. This happens when we've seen God's beauty, His purity and holiness, and when we recognize that sin cannot dwell with Him (Psalm 5:4). When Isaiah stood in the presence of God, he was immediately overwhelmed by his own sinfulness: "Woe to me! . . . I am ruined!" When the Holy Spirit convicts people of their sin, He represents the righteous judgment of God (Hebrews 4:12). There is no appeal of this verdict. Throughout 2016, the national conviction rate for Indian Penal Code crimes was 46.8%: 596,078 were convicted and 678,270 were acquitted/discharged; moreover, 1,060,724 were convicted of SLL[clarification needed] crimes and 226,546 were acquitted or discharged of them, making the conviction rate for SLL[clarification needed] crimes 82.4%, and giving an overall.
